

Death at the British Embassy

By Norma Moss

New Generation Publishing, United Kingdom, 2013. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 200 x 126 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .It was an unlikely encounter between the British Ambassador's dog and the Gurkha's cat that led to the discovery of the body in the embassy lake. Everybody believed that the body of a young Thai female had been intended to be discovered at the Embassy Fair. Nobody discounted the impact such a discovery would have had. But whose body was it? Miow, the young and beautiful undercover agent working at the embassy, was missing and nobody seemed to know where she was. A jealous wife of an embassy official thought that she might even have killed Miow in a jealous drunken moment! Working back from the discovery, the police discover that a meeting had taken place between Mark Stone, the famous British yachtsman and an unknown man. At the British Council stall a book had changed hands and later Stone met with this unknown man at the Khaosarn Road. The international sailing fraternity was gathering at Phuket and Marcus Stone was tipped to win the big race; but the embassy had information that Stone was...
