JACKSONLAND: PRESIDENT ANDREW JACKSON, CHEROKEE CHIEF JOHN ROSS, AND A GREAT AME

Penguin/BOMC. 1 Cloth(s), 2015. hard. Book Condition: New. Even as President Andrew Jackson presided over a mass re-ocation of Native American tribes in the 1830s, Cherokee Chief John Ross took the cause of the Five Civilized Tribes all the way to the Supreme Court. Here NPR Morning Edition co-host Steve Inskeep recounts how Ross and his allies made their case in the media of the era, committed civil disobedience, and benefited from the first mass political action by American women. Despite gaining allies like Senator Henry Clay, Chief Justice John Marshall, and even Davy Crockett, Ross and his people were swept along by westward expansion. Continuing to amass wealth and land by depriving Native Americans of basic rights, however, Jackson set the stage for the Trail of Tears and the Civil War."The story of the Cherokee removal has been told many times, but never before has a single book given us such a sense of how it happened and what it meant, not only for Indians, but also for the future and soul of America."Washington Post"Steve Inskeep has found an illuminating and provocative way to talk about the American pastand, truth be told, the American present and future too. By taking us back to the epic struggle between Andrew Jackson and Chief John Ross, Inskeep tells an essential story of geography, greed, and power: and the forces he so clearly delineates are the ones that shape us still."Jon Meacham 421.
